but one juror selected as a result of the three days' examination of veniremen. Four of the men accepted by the State and not yet examined by the attorneys for the defense were held.

Two policemen stood at the entrance of the courtroom and searched every one who entered, including women, for weapons that might be given to the prisoners to aid their escape. Six of the men searched were found to be armed. Their weapons were confiscated.

REPUBLICANS MEET AT AMBOY

Will Select Delegates for State Senatorial Convention Jan. 25. REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Dixon, Ill., Jan. 8.-The Lee County Republican Committee met at Amboy to-day and called a county convention for Januand called a county convention for January 25, when delegates will be selected for State, Senatorial and Congressional conventions. Colonel Frank O. Lowden was present and made a short address.

The delegates to be selected are practically piedged to him, and will be so instructed. A strong effort is being made to have all counties in Northern Illinois friendly to Colonel Lowden hold early conventions and instruct for him.

Ogle County Convention will be held on the same day Lee County Convention will be held. The friends of Governor Yates have been unable to perfect an organization in these counties.

THREE-QUARTER LENGTH COATS NOW IN FAVOR.

These Garments Are Seen in Many Different Materials and Shapes -They Are Exceedingly Popular for Theater Wear-Light Shade Velvet Cloaks, Trimmed With Fur and Lace, Also Much in Evidence.

AFTERNOON CALLING GOWN.

The new silk canvas is shown in this afternoon gown in a warm shade of helioppe, with craponne lace, dyed to match, and velvet of a much deeper tint cleverly bound with velvet.

A band of the velvet-bound lace passes down the fronts and around the garment.

The sleeves are plain, with a simple cuff of the lace.

The skirt is arranged in panel effects, broad bands of velvet appearing between

It is not so heavy, is easier to throw off and put on, and it does not hide the form over which it is worn, but with an elaborate bell gown of thin material the ! ong all-developing coat is much more ensible, and after all is more graceful. Ermine and sable are the two most fashionable furs used to trim evening coats, and there is no use to which ermine can be put more satisfactorily.

One of the smartest coats of the winter

The large, full sleeves are braided at the top, and at the wrist are gathered into wide ermine cuffs, which are finished with lace ruffles; the lace of a deep cream color makes the white of the ermine and the velvet or cloth much less trying, for, as is well known, ermine cannot be classed with the generally becoming furs. This same cloak, made up in pale yellow brocade, with sable instead of ermine, is also superb in coloring and effect, and it is merely a matter of personal taste as to which is the handsomer.

ATTRACTIVE TRAVELING FROCKS. Garments Are Embellished With

The selection of traveling frocks is frequently found to be a difficult matter, for they must be becoming, and above all things practical and useful.

One, worthy of attention, was carried out in reseda green cloth, its dominant note in all particulars being simplicity. The neat little coat was cut double-breasted, and prettily strapped and embellished with a touch of fine silver embroidery.

lished with a touch of fine silver embroidery.

This, when worn open, displayed a daintily tucked lawn shirt with linen collar and dark green velvet tie, both being feminine in style, yet of irreproachable neatness. The skirt was gracefully pleated and cut trottoir length; and designed to wear with this costume was a warm green cloth wrap and a pretty felt hat trimmed with ivy leaves and berries.

By substituting a more elaborate hat and blouse for those worn when en voyage this model could be donned on other occasions.

FURS THAT ARE WORN. Moleskin Is Superseding Squirrel This Winter. Mole continues to lead the popular van of fashion, and has put gray squirre completely out of the running, except in the case of motoring.

Which reminds us to chronicle, while the thought is in the way with us, that a squirrel three-quarter sacque coat and toque with adjustable flap comprises not merely the ideal motoring attire, but is also equally useful for traveling and Channel crossings during the winter months.

And to all would-be humanitarians prepared to pour vials of wrath on my head for even acknowledging these subterfuges I would answer, when existence warrants our dispensing with food in the shape of birds and beasts, then will it be time enough to raise a protesting finger against the use of the outer husks, says Home Chat.

Although deep, full lace ruffles are still privileged to exert their ornamental influence as a finish to the great sleeves now exacted by in mode, among the quite exclusive the feeling runs more strongly every day in favor of chiffon.

Entire muffs of chiffon, finishing at either end in great ruffles, and banded twice or three times with narrow lines of fur, are among the details to be immediately desired; these oftentimes are completed by long, dressy stoles similarly fashloned.

The hat is of ivory-white chenlile braids, trimmed with a circle of little ostrich tips, these being pink at the quill and shading to white at the tips. The exquisite ostrich boa is in cape and double stole effect in a soft shade of gray, the cape portion setting well over the shoulders and the long, double ends falling almost to the feet.

HOW TO FRAME PICTURES.

Photographs Often Fade When Im-Everybody collects prints and photographs that they would like to preserve, but framing is rather expensive business when cost is to be conzidered.

So many pictures grow faded and worn from being shoved from place to place and are finally classed as trash and destroyed because of a lack of knowledge in the framing art.

Glass and binding are the essentials and an adept advises brown for photographs of brown tone, dark gray for black, pale gray for lighter tones, and dark green for an all-round good color. If you are distant from shops you can make your own binding out of plain wall paper or thin brown paper, cutting it into even strips an inch wide and properly Fastened Behind Glass.

then into four pieces, two of them the exact length of the top and bottom of the frame, and then the other two half an inch longer than the two sides.

Put the picture, with or without the mount, between the glass and the back, taking care that it is in perfectly even.

Brush the longer pieces with mucliage and bind the edges, allowing the paper to project over a third of an inch on the face side, while the ends which were left longer can be turned over and stuck at the back. Then in the same way bind the top and bottom edges together, mitering the corners neatly.

Before binding the edges together make two slits in the cardboard back where the flat ends of the little brass hangers may be inserted.

MADRASES FOR SHIRT WAISTS. Silks of Soft Construction Are Equally Popular.

The new white materials have been heavy canvases and madrases for shirt waists and shirt-waist suits.

No linens have been displayed so far, but their popularity is taken for granted. Silks of soft construction, such as peau de sole, peau de cygne, shantungs, naural and dyed, and soft finish taffetas will undoubtedly rule.

and dyed, and soft finish tanctas will undoubtedly rule.

These silks will be made up into shirt-waist suits for spring wear, to the exclusion, it is prophesied, of figured foulards. However, foulards are so pretty and becoming that it is not probable that they will be shelved altogether.

They have been worn so long that they have come to have a sort of a common-placeness, and that always heralds a change of some kind.

INDIVIDUALITY OF PROCES. Carments Made to Suit Figures, So

That Harmony Will Prevail.
Studying the lines of the figure when designing a gown is the secret of the sucdesigning a gown is the secret of the success some of the leading dressmakers have attained of late years, for no longer now is it possible to make everybody's clothes alike.

There must be some individuality about the gown, or the smart look considered indispensable is lacking, and no beauty of material, no wealth of trimming can make up for it.

The shaped front breadth much narrow-er at the waist than the hem also gives a good effect, especially when outlined with braid.

LIGHT SILKS IN EVIDENCE. Indications as to What Will Be Wors

in the Spring. At this time of year one looks for two things in the shops—bargain sales of winter coats, wraps, and gowns, and indications of what will be worn in spring and summer fabrics.

Immediately after Christmas the shop windows blossom forth with muslins and light silks, and for those who can afford to purchase ahead, there are exclusive patterns that never appear later in the year.

There is an advantage in exclusiveness not to be denied. The simplest gown that is unmistakably in this class has a distinction and a cachet of its own. Thus it is well worth while to buy these January and February airy offerings. At this time of year one looks for two

Very appropriately the greater number of the coats, although other shades and colorigs are not neglected, will be variously trimmed with scarlet and gold beads and brass buttons, these latter being flat or round or bullet shape.

Of course, the military shape is indispensable to the correct soldierly effect, and the smart girl will vary it in depth and in width to suit the needs of her size and style.
